Tuesday, March 10

7 to 8:30 pm

Hinsdale Middle School Commons

100 South Garfield Avenue, Hinsdale

How do you tailor the high school experience to have fun and minimize stress, while at the same time keeping an eye toward selective college admission?

We hear from many people “I learned so much when my oldest child went through high school that it would have been good to know earlier.” Why not learn these things now, from experienced parents and experts? We’ll hear:

- An explanation of the testing and college application process
- Advice that middle school students and their families should know
- Answers to questions from the audience

This event is open to the entire community. It is geared toward parents of middle school children whose children potentially aspire to selective or highly selective colleges. Middle school children themselves are also welcome to attend.
