

The Gifted Education Cooperative

Presents

Janet Gore

co-author of

A Parent's Guide to Gifted Children

10 Things for Parents to Know About Gifted Children

Wednesday, September 23, 2009

7 to 8:30 pm

Monroe School

210 North Madison Street, Hinsdale, IL

Janet Gore, noted author and gifted expert, will explain common characteristics and behaviors of gifted children at school and in the family, the wide range within giftedness, five levels of gifted and what each needs, the various intensities of gifted children and how to deal with these, and school issues, including educational approaches and options. She will talk about many common concerns such as perfectionism, underachievement, and emotional sensitivity, and will offer strategies for parents to use in guiding their gifted children. There will be time for questions.

A Parent's Guide to Gifted Children is a four-time award winner, including the National Best Books Award. It is the book that GECO used in our two guided reading groups last year. It provides practical guidance in areas such as: characteristics of gifted children; peer relations; sibling issues; motivation & underachievement; discipline issues; intensity & stress; and much, much more! We are excited to have one of the authors come share her expertise! Copies of this and related books will be available for sale at the event. Credit cards will be accepted.

GECO is an organization open to anyone interested, whether their child has been formally tested/identified or not. Members and non-members are welcome at this event.

Questions? Contact Susan Portland at 630-920-1027 or email geco@arvamont.com